U.U. Small Group Ministr

Vol. 4, No.1, Fall, 2007 Published by the U.U. Small Group Ministry Network

From the New President Of the Small Group Ministry Network

Diana Dorroh, Baton Rouge, LA

The Annual Meeting of the UU Small Group Ministry Network occurred in June at the Unitarian Universalist General Assembly in Portland, Oregon. At the meeting, I was elected to serve as President of the UU Small Group Ministry Network. I am honored and excited to serve in this capacity. You are all doing very important work for your own congregations and for the growth and health of our liberal religious movement. The Network exists to support and enhance this work. The Network was founded three years ago by Rev. Calvin Dame, Rev. M'ellen Kennedy and Peter Bowden. Calvin has served as president since the Network started and his inspiration and hard work helped lay a solid foundation. He provided consistent leadership over these years, established the connection that made our week-long workshops at Ferry Beach possible, wrote many of our excellent resource materials and so much more. It is very humbling to follow him as president. We extend our gratitude to Calvin as he completes his time on the Board. The other founding members, M'ellen and Peter, remain in staff roles. At the Annual Meeting we also elected three wonderful new Board members: Mary Ann Terry, Anne Haynes, and Steve Becker (see their bios on page 2). Susan Hollister, Walter LeFlore, and Rev. Helen Zidowecki continue to serve. We wish to thank Rev. Marti Keller for two years of service, as she steps off the board this fall.

Also at General Assembly this year, I had the fun of spending some time in the Network's booth in the Exhibit Hall. It was very exciting to talk to so many people about their small group ministry programs. I estimate that I talked to about seventy ministers and lay leaders. Nobody was saying to me "This doesn't work. We tried it and it failed" or even "We want to start some groups and don't know where to begin." Instead, we were hearing about healthy, vibrant programs and were being asked specific questions about how to make them better. Questions like:

- "How should we train our facilitators?"
- "What should the role of the minister be?"
- "Where can I get some session materials?" and
- "What do we do with especially needy members?"
- It was invigorating being in the booth and engaging in these conversations. Our two workshops were also well attended. Susan Hollister, Treasurer, and I had to sit on the floor for the workshop entitled "Emerging Models of Small Group Ministry."

Suggestions for Facilitators On Developing Relational Ground Rules For Small Group Ministry Groups

Rev. M'ellen Kennedy, Bristol, VT

One of the foundations of Small Group Ministry is that each group abides by a set of relational ground rules. The point of the ground rules is to help the group accomplish its goals of building friendships and deeper spiritual exploration or intimacy and ultimacy.

Wherever you find groups -- in the congregation, at work, or in the community -- it's a given that groups have rules. Quite often, the rules are unstated or implicit, but they still exist and influence the dynamics of the group. In Small Group Ministry we aim for explicit and overt ground rules. There are many problems that result from implicit and covert rules.

Implicit or Covert Rules Lead To:

- * An "in group" versus an "out group"
- * Anxiety for those in the "out group"
- * An unwelcoming environment especially for newcomers
- * Control of the group by the "in group", usually unintentional
- * Lower level of comfort, participation and risk taking
- * Lower level of shared leadership
- * Less likelihood of accomplishing the purposes of intimacy and ultimacy

By contrast, explicit and overt ground rules create a more open, relaxed and friendly environment.

The Benefit and Value of Explicit and Overt Ground Rules

- * Everyone is in the know
- * Increases comfort level
- * Creates safe environment for deeper sharing
- * Newcomers integrate more easily and quickly
- * Shared leadership is encouraged
- * Higher level of participation
- * More dynamic and vital groups
- * We learn how to create community together
- * More likelihood of accomplishing the purposes of intimacy and ultimacy

One approach to developing ground rules is to have each group come up with its own ground rules. Members are much more involved and have a sense of ownership when they do this important work themselves. The process helps to build shared leadership and dynamic groups. Members are much more likely to understand and (Continued on page 4)

From the New Network President

In July 2007, The Unitarian Universalist Association notified the Network that we are no longer an affiliate of the UUA. We are not alone. Only four reapplications out of about seventy were approved. We have been working with the UUA Board and Staff to design a new working relationship. We'll keep you posted on the results, but it looks very promising.

In September, the Board held our annual twoday retreat in Devon, Pennsylvania hosted by Mainline Unitarian Church and Susan Hollister. Thanks to the leaders of Mainline Unitarian Church for their gracious welcoming of our group. All of our Board members and one staff member, M'ellen Kennedy, attended. It was an intense and productive experience, as we addressed the organizational issues of a three-year old organization. We elected officers: Steve Becker, Vice-President, Helen Zidowecki, Secretary, and Susan Hollister, Treasurer. We set goals and made plans to execute them. Many of our goals are institutional:

- * Creating a workable relationship with the UUA;
- * Completing the work to get our 501c3 status;
- * Establishing a workable process for interrelatedness of our membership, web site, CG News and the Quarterly;
- * Improving professional working relationships with staff;
- * Developing a comprehensive data base of our constituency; and
- * Fully funding our goals.

We also planned to:

- * Continue the "District Initiative," which consists of working within the targeted districts to promote SGM;
- * Ensure that quality workshops and conferences are offered;
- * Offer a national comprehensive small group ministry conference.

In summary, the challenge for the UU Small Group Ministry Network Board is to strengthen and improve the Network organization, and its relationship with the UUA, while continuing to offer conferences, training sessions and a presence at General Assembly. It's a tall order and may take more than one year.

The rest of the Board, the staff and I continue to need your help and support to build on the foundation we've established in our first three years. The most concrete form of assistance you can give is to become a member or supporter. If you're not yet a member, considering joining the Network (see back page for details). In addition, there are volunteer opportunities on several committees including the Education and Conference Committee, the Membership Committee and the Fundraising Committee. I'm looking forward to working with and serving you in continuing to build a strong small group ministry movement.

Welcome New Board Members!

We are delighted to welcome three new members to the Board of the UU Small Group Ministry Network. They were elected to the Board in June at the Network's Annual Meeting in Portland, OR. Biographies of other Board members may be found on-line at www.smallgroupministry.net.

Steve Becker, Seattle, WA

Steve is enjoying serving on the Board from Seattle, Washington, as a member of the University Unitarian Church. A lifelong Unitarian, Steve brings over ten years of experience as an Adult Religious Education teacher, Social Justice activist, and membership trainer. Most recently, he has served at the East Shore Unitarian Church as the Chair of their Membership Committee. He has belonged to a Covenant Circle for four years while at East Shore, where he has developed new session topics and helped facilitate one of the groups.

Anne Haynes, Bloomington, IN

Anne has been a Unitarian Universalist and a member of the UU Church of Bloomington, Indiana since 1981. She has held various lay leadership positions there, including congregational President. She and her husband Chris participated in the Small Group Ministry week at Ferry Beach in 2005. For the last two years they were involved in starting the Chalice Circles program in their congregation. Anne first experienced small group ministry as a member of an Evensong group, and passionately believes small group ministry meets many needs for our congregants and congregational life. She served as co-chair of the small group ministry implementation committee at UUCB. Anne now serves as a member of the executive team at UUCB and is looking forward to the church's second year of Chalice Circles. She also facilitates one of the groups.

Mary Ann Terry, Isle of Palms, SC

MaryAnn is enthusiastic about Small Group Ministry. She is an active lay leader at the Unitarian Church in Charleston, South Carolina where she serves as coordinator of Connecting Circles (their name for SGM) where, among other things, she helps train group facilitators. She participated in the Small Group Ministry Week at Ferry Beach in Saco, Maine in 2005. She spends her summers in New Hampshire where she attends the Star King UU Fellowship in Plymouth. She is pleased to be serving on the Board, helping promote Small Group Ministry in our movement.

Leaders aren't born they are made. And they are made just like anything else, through hard work. And that's the price we'll have to pay to achieve that goal, or any goal. ~ Vince Lombardi

The UU Small Group Ministry Network (UUSGM Network)

Our Mission:

"To help create healthy congregations and a vital Unitarian Universalist movement by promoting and supporting Small Group Ministry."

The UU Small Group Ministry Network is a membership-based organization. The purpose of the Network is to support small group ministry and related shared ministry models in Unitarian Universalist congregations through developing new resources, networking and training opportunities.

District Connections For Small Group Ministry

The UU Small Group Ministry Network is working on establishing connections in each of our districts to promote Small Group Ministry throughout our liberal religious movement. Offering workshops and information tables at the annual district meetings is one avenue for doing this. If you would like to help in this effort, please contact M'ellen Kennedy at mellen@smallgroupministry.net.

The UUSGM Quarterly Editor: M'ellen Kennedy

The UUSGM Quarterly provides information, explores issues and shares resources on Small Group Ministry or Covenant Groups. It is funded primarily by our members like you. Do you have a SGM experience to share, or a testimonial, or an exciting aspect of the SGM program in your congregation? Please send your submissions, your ideas and requests for topics to mellen@smallgroupministry.net.

What Is Small Group Ministry?

Small Group Ministry (SGM) or Covenant Groups are revitalizing our congregations. The groups provide an opportunity for community building and spiritual exploration for their members. The groups serve both newcomers and "old-timers" in our congregations who may not yet have found a way to connect deeply in our congregations.

In recent years, many Unitarian Universalist congregations have started Small Group Ministry Programs. A typical group has about ten members, is guided by a trained facilitator, meets at least once a month and creates and abides by a covenant or set of ground rules. Facilitators usually meet regularly for ongoing support and training.

The group meeting format includes a time for centering, an opening reading, a checkin, usually a discussion of a topic agreed on by members, thought-provoking questions, checkout and a closing. Each group develops a way to welcome new members, stays connected with the larger congregation, and participates occasionally in service projects to benefit the congregation and/ or the larger community. The kinds of topics that groups explore are far ranging and are usually tailored to the interests of participants.

Small Group Ministry is creating new opportunities for connection, growth and depth for our visitors and members.

Developing Relational Ground Rules

thus abide by the ground rules if they develop them themselves. Engaging in this process also helps members learn the art of community building.

When a new group is formed, you can develop ground rules together with the other members by spending time on the task in the first meeting or an early meeting. You can ask the group something like, "What understandings or ground rules do you need to feel comfortable enough to accomplish our goals of intimacy and ultimacy in this group?" Then you write on a flip chart the items that are suggested as ground rules by members (including your own items). Discuss each item and clarify or refine as needed. It's crucial that everyone understands each item and that everyone is on board. Keep it as simple as possible. If the list that the group members generate goes beyond one page, that may be too much for folks to recall and abide by with ease. Try also to be concrete. For example a ground rule to "be polite" may be too vague. On the other hand, "One person speak at a time" is concrete.

Below is a list of items that are likely to come up when you do the exercise of developing ground rules together. When you do this exercise in your group, if something important is omitted, you can suggest adding it.

Sample List of Ground Rules To accomplish our goals of intimacy and ultimacy, we'll do our best to:

- * Respect the right to pass. (That is you can opt not to speak or participate in any part of the meeting).
- * Listen deeply and respectfully.
- * Have one person speak at a time.
- * Don't interrupt, unless it's for a process comment (i.e. "I can't hear you." or "Please explain that term.").
- * Start and end on time.
- * Share the privilege and responsibility of helping the group to function well.
- * Share the time fairly.
- * Respect confidentiality: What is said in the group stays in the group. You can talk about your own stuff out of
- * Speak from your own experience (use "I" statements).
- * Don't giving advice. We're not here to "fix" others.
- * Make our best effort to attend each meeting, (Or other clear understanding about attendance).
- * If something doesn't suit you, speak up.

It's crucial that the ground rules are a living document and not just something tucked away somewhere in the archives. Once the group is finished with the exercise of drawing up the ground rules, you may say something like, "Let's try these for several meetings and see how it feels. Let's revisit them in a few months."

The ground rules need to change as the needs of the group change. It's helpful to write up the list of items recorded on the flipchart and provide a copy for each (Continued in right hand column on this page)

Need Sessions for Your Groups?

Did you know that you can find and download Small Group Ministry Sessions from our web site, www.smallgroupministry.net? This is one of the top resources for which people access our site. SGM Network Coordinator, Peter Bowden, maintains the web site. Small Group Ministry enthusiasts from all over the country contribute to the web site. A session (in case you're not familiar with the term) is a short (usually one page) handout on a specific topic with the necessary opening, readings, questions and closing. A session is used as a guide and a springboard for discussion in most SGM Programs. Using these on-line sessions can make supporting and managing your small group ministry program so much easier. Here are some of the sessions currently posted:

* Listening * Creating Paradise

* Truth * Belonging In Community

* Fear * Engaging Our Theological Diversity

* Adversity * To Live Deliberately * Humor * Beyond the Word "God" * Worship * On Following Your Bliss

* Global Warming * Poetry * Self Esteem * Sweet Bird of Paradox * Gossip * The Seven UU Principles * Service * A Series on Radical Hospitality

There are 24 sessions on a variety of topics by Rev. Glen Turner, and sessions have been contributed by lay and professional leaders from far and wide including from Monterey, CA, Olney, MD, Atlanta, GA, RI and more.

Do you have some great sessions that You'd like to share? Your sessions could be a big help to others doing this work. Wouldn't it be great if every congregation doing Small Group Ministry contributed one session a year? If you'd like to submit a session, please email Peter Bowden at peter@smallgroupministry.net. Send the session as MS Word, RTF, Simple Text or PDF files. Please include your name, congregation, and city and state. Thanks for helping this grass roots movement flourish!

Developing Ground Rules (continued from left) member at the next meeting. Go over the list again at the next meeting. At the next few meetings after that, review the ground rules again briefly. Review the ground rules ANY TIME THERE IS A NEW MEMBER. Revise them as needed to accommodate new members and to get the real support and consent of each new member.

After the ground rules have been established, in order to maintain a healthy group, it's a good idea to review the ground rules periodically – in about three months for a new group or about every six months for an ongoing group. (For more info on a "Regular Group Health Checkup" see the article in the Fall '06 Issue of this Ouarterly. available on-line at smallgroupministry.net).)

Tips for Facilitators

Mary Ann Terry, Isle of Palms, SC

No matter what your church calls small group meetings, -- be it Chalice Groups, Covenant Groups or Connecting Circles -- there is a special magic to an effective meeting. It may be experienced as a feeling of integrity, a glint in the eye, an aha, a new respect for a fellow member, a reflective quietness, or just a plain "that makes sense to me." It brings a joy that makes you feel good that you came to the meeting that day. It is not magic – not that I want to take away from the holy spirit (please notice no caps.) The working of a facilitator who knows his/her craft can enhance the effectiveness of a meeting. As more and more small groups are sharing the leadership of our meetings, I would like to offer a few tips to the "new emerging facilitators."

In our church in Charleston, SC we offered a facilitators' training at the beginning of the church year in October and we'll offer it again in January. It includes a potluck supper with all members attending, a fun getacquainted game, a review of our guidelines, a time for revising the guidelines, some role-playing, and a question and answer time. Here are some tips we include in our facilitator training.

Tip#1 Review ground rules for your groups.

The ground rules are to add to the integrity of the meeting and not to stand in the way of the flow of the meeting. They may include items such as: respecting confidentiality, having only one person speak at a time, no advice giving, staying on the topic, and beginning and ending on time. They are key for an effective meeting. The facilitator can help keep members on the "path". A facilitator can say, "I think it's time to remember one of our ground rules...(stating the rule kindly). Does that help us get back on track?"

Tip#2 Members sharing their stories of grappling with a concept, feeling or experience, are important.

The most significant factor for success among our folks is providing a place where they can explore and express their thoughts, feelings, concepts and life stories in a secure environment of listeners. This develops in the group as it grows in security, trust, caring and friendship. Sometimes if these stories get off-topic or long, the facilitator may need to decide whether to intercede. An important part of facilitating is to be sensitive and to able to decide when a story is no longer appropriate. The facilitator can start by saying, "Sorry to interrupt you, John, we probably need you to finish this story."

Tip#3 You are in charge but you are not in charge.

Your job is to empower others. Strive to encourage discussion and sharing among group members. Start the meeting with a welcome. Be at ease and open. Be mindful that for that session, you are the responsible person in leading the group "as you would wish to be led." Watch the timing for check-in (usually two minutes per person), and have some thoughts to share yourself when the occasion presents itself. Your job is to encourage others to speak. Leave enough time for a closing. You need not end the meeting with a great summation. The chosen closing words will do. The purpose of the meeting is to encourage each of us in our own spiritual journey.

If your actions inspire others to dream more, learn more, do more and become more, you are a leader.

Need Help with Your Youth Group? Youth SGM Resource Available Commissioned by the UUSGM Network Written by the Rev. Helen Zidowecki

The Small Group Ministry format has been used effectively with Youth to create powerful group experiences. Drawing on her years of experience working directly with Youth, Helen Zidowecki has created "Small Group Ministry with Youth", a useful booklet for those wanting concrete help. This resource includes a session for facilitators, and discussion and session plans for The Five Steps to Building Community and Six Components of a Balanced Youth Program. A total of 25 session plans are included. The resource costs $25 plus $5 shipping and handling. All proceeds from this resource, in excess of development cost, go to support the ministry of the UUSGM Network. You can order the resource on-line at smallgroupministry.net or contact Susan Hollister at sbhollister@juno.com

Starting a Revolution: Roots of the Small Group Ministry Movement An Audio Interview with Rev. Glenn Turner Peter Bowden, UU PLANET

Rev. Glenn Turner who retired from ministry a few years ago, was one of the original leaders in the UU small group ministry movement. This CD is an oral history, 70 minute interview of Glenn conducted by Peter Bowden. This is a great starting point for those of you interested in getting to know more about our SGM movement's history. Glenn shares his experiences with small groups and working with facilitators, and his thoughts on where all of this is going. The interview is divided into fifteen tracks. You may listen to samples of each track and order the audio CD at www.smallgroupminsitry.net.

Enhance Your Small Group Ministry Program With A Local or Regional Training

Congregations with existing Small Group Ministry Programs often find that they periodically need a "tune up" to keep the vision of SGM alive and to continue offering high-quality training for successive generations of facilitators. In addition, congregations starting a new program or re-starting a dormant program often desire encouragement and assistance from experienced leaders in the movement. Do these needs resonate with your experience? If so, consider hosting a regional or local SGM conference.

A regional workshop gives the perfect opportunity for congregations in a given geographic area to get together, to receive training and guidance from experienced old-timers and experts, and to hear about each other's program successes, challenges and ideas.

The UU Small Group Ministry Network helps local leaders plan such conferences tailored to the current needs of the congregation(s) attending. Following is a comment from an attendees at a workshop at First Congregational Unitarian Church, Concord, NH, Fall 2007.

"The workshop was utterly amazing -informative, helpful, and inspiring! I am so grateful to you for offering the workshop, and look forward to spreading the word and the concepts. SGM has such great potential to strengthen, and deepen, the relationships and spirituality, in our congregation. Thank you, thank you, many times over."

To explore the possibility of a local or regional conference in your area, please contact us at conferences@smallgroupministry.net.

Beyond The Basics: A Gathering and Training for Leaders of Mature Small Group Ministry Programs

February 23, 2008, 10 AM-4 PM First Universalist Chapel Society Woodstock, VT

This workshop is aimed at lay and professional leaders working with functioning SGM programs -- that is programs that have been in existence for at least a year. It will be an opportunity to gather for mutual support, in depth sharing and advanced training. Registrants will be asked to bring materials to share from the successes and challenges of their programs. For more info contact M'ellen Kennedy at mellenken@aol.com.

Small Group Ministry At General Assembly June 25-29, 2008 Fort Lauderdale, Florida For more info, visit uua.org

The UU Small Group Ministry Network will present the following workshop at General Assembly this year. In addition, we hope to offer a booth in the Exhibit Hall.

Strategies and Solutions For Small Group Ministry Challenges

Many congregations are using Small Group Ministry to meet the needs for intimacy and spiritual growth. We will provide strategies to successfully run programs to prevent and avoid common pitfalls. We'll focus particularly on handling "extra grace needed" members, and hidden cultural biases that can limit program effectiveness.

Building and Sustaining A Strong Small Group Ministry Program Saturday, January 12, 2008, 9:30 AM-4 PM

Snow date: Saturday January 19.

Northshore Unitarian Universalist Church, Danvers, MA

This workshop is for both those staring new programs and those with existing programs. The following topics will be covered: the power and purpose of Small Group Ministry; the essential components of a Small Group Ministry program; addressing common challenges in an SGM program; developing shared leadership within a small group; development stages or facilitators and groups; handling group difficulties; and a hands-on experience in an actual small group.

The workshop leader is the Rev. Dr. M'ellen Kennedy, a UU community minister and community psychologist with over 20 years experience training lay and professionals leaders. The cost of the workshop is $40 for one member of a church to attend and $35 for each additional person from the same church. Lunch is included. For more info contact Judy Putnam of the Northshore UU Church (judyputnam@comcast.net).

U.U. Small Group Ministry Newton Square, PA 19073 Fall 2007

Fall. 2007

Dear Small Group Ministry Friends.

We are writing to you on behalf of the Unitarian Universalist Small Group Ministry Network because we all share a common passion: making our congregations healthier and happier through Small Group Ministries or Covenant Groups.

The mission of the Network is "to help create healthy congregations and a vital Unitarian Universalist movement by promoting and supporting Small Group Ministry." We do that by developing new resources, training leaders, and providing opportunities for small group participants to get together and share experiences. Our website has a wealth of free, practical resources such as session plans, event listings, the monthly Covenant Group e-Newsletter, and the SGM Quarterly journal. Please visit us at www.smallgroupministry.net.

In the three years since it was founded, the Network has developed a reputation for excellent workshops and materials. The producers of the UU "Lay Leader Drive" Time Essays 2" named the Network as one of the top ten resources for Unitarian Universalist congregations. The Network was initially funded by the Fund for Unitarian Universalism, but we receive no other Association funding. Most of those doing the work of the Network are volunteers. Support for this important ministry has to come from gifts, and individual and congregational memberships.

Now we need to ask for your help. We know that many of you take a special collection monthly in support of various causes. Many of you also hold an annual Small Group Ministry Sunday in which you recognize and honor the facilitators and participants who make up your small groups. (If you don't do that now, we hope you will consider scheduling such a Sunday program.) Our request is that you pass an open plate for contributions to the small group ministry program, yours and ours, during your Small Group Ministry Sundays. We ask that you forward part of that collection to the UU Small Group Ministry Network so that we may continue to help congregations start Small Group Ministry programs and to support these programs where they are already helping our congregations expand and deepen.

All of us associated with the Network appreciate deeply your continued leadership in the Small Group Ministry movement.

Sincerely yours,

Rev. Glenn Turner, Rev. Robert L. Hill,

The Advisory Board of the U. U. Small Group Ministry Network
